Endnotes

3. The interviewees who mentioned Bill and Melinda Gates as development champions usually referred to them as individuals rather than in relation to the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. In addition, respondents who mentioned only one of the two usually mentioned Bill Gates.

4. The research for this report was restricted to urban areas primarily for logistical and cost reasons. Previous research also shows that the bulk of the populations of all three target groups reside in urban areas.

5. China, for example, is the only country covered in this study that is categorized by most international organizations as a developing country, thus the understanding of international development in China is not the same as in the other surveyed countries, which needs to be taken into account in the interpretation of the research findings.

6. See Appendix 1—Research Methodology for a more detailed description.

7. This section of the The Guardian receives support from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation.

8. The speaker was referring to the 31st G8 summit at the Gleneagles Hotel in Auchterarder, Scotland, July 2005.